Texas-based Strategic Partnerships, Inc., Florida's CJIS GROUP offer free newsletter tracking federal stimulus bill funding

Crawfordville, FL (May 12, 2009) – Florida-based CJIS Group and Strategic Partnerships, Inc. (SPI) in Austin, Texas, are again partnering – this time offering another unique and valuable service to companies interested in finding and capturing government contracts. With passage of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA), billions of dollars worth of government contracting opportunities are being produced nationwide. To keep vendors abreast of information, updates and breaking news about where the dollars are going and how they are being spent, SPI is now producing and distributing a national e-newsletter, the State & Local Government Pipeline, that focuses on the ARRA funding and related government contracting opportunities. CJIS is making the newsletter available to its clients and potential clients as well. There is no charge associated with the publication.

SPI and CJIS began partnering in initiatives like this more than a year ago. The objective is to ensure that vendors seeking government contracting opportunities nationwide would have access to hard-to-come-by information. Both CJIS and SPI are research firms specializing in procurement research tailored to clients' needs. Both firms also boast a stable of veteran former executive-level government decision-makers to assist in the area of public sector procurement. This weekly newsletter is another service both companies use to augment their services.

“Our objective is to make the State & Local Government Pipeline the premier source for state and local government news and contracting opportunities,” said Mary Scott Nabers, SPI president and CEO. “The recovery act funding and the resulting opportunities in all 50 states will be a top focus. However, the newsletter will also cover national trends, budget updates, planned initiatives and breaking news.”

“The newsletter will provide readers a central location for information, updates and breaking news on ARRA funding,” said CJIS President and CEO PJ Doyle. “More and more companies are moving to the public sector for contracting opportunities because of the economic downturn, and the State & Local Government Pipeline is a unique guide for following the money.”

While CJIS Group provides information on technology needs in the criminal justice and public safety arena, the company is also known for its subject matter experts, consulting services, strategic planning, education and training and customer research.

SPI is a full-service government relations procurement consulting and national research firm that specializes in procurement consulting, governmental affairs, customized research, government sales training and other services.
